RINOs Will Always Be RINOS

MITT ROMNEY

A CHIP OFF THE OLD BLOCKHEAD

By Roderick Beaman

In 1960, Democrat John F. Kennedy very narrowly defeated Republican Richard M. Nixon for president. His plurality, not a majority, was about 0.1%. Pundits stated that if just one voter per precinct had switched from Kennedy to Nixon, Nixon would have won. It was that close.

Rumors ran rife that Nixon had won but that irregularities, i.e. frauds, had occurred in Illinois, Texas, West Virginia and Colorado. Illinois and Texas were very understandable. Chicago's mayor was Richard 'Vote early & often' Daley & Texas was home to Lyndon B. Johnson who had won his senate race when one town 'found' a trove of votes that had been overwhelmingly cast for him, at a proportion far greater than the rest of the state.

In the 1962 mid-term election, the Democrats lost fewer seats than usual for the party in the White House. That was likely due to the successful American face off with the USSR of the Cuban Missile Crisis that ended just nine days before the election. Events like that spur a lot of support for any president.

Despite all that, there was evidence of growing voter dissatisfaction with Kennedy. The economic doldrums he'd campaigned against had continued. In fact, the issue of Time magazine of the very day of his assassination had an article about disillusionment with him on college campuses.

The civil rights movement was presenting him with a lot of political problems due to the resistance of the then solidly Democratic south. Martin Luther King, Jr's efforts, black voter registration drives, Freedom Rides and sit-ins at segregated businesses were leading to conflicts and even violence. The South was a Democratic stronghold and blacks were increasingly turning Democratic from their traditional Republican roots. The Kennedys wanted to alienate neither.

By 1963, the Kennedy camp was taking stock of his potential 1964 opponents. Richard Nixon had been consigned to the political cemetery because of his loss in his 1962 campaign to unseat California Gov. Edmund 'Pat' Brown, Sr., father of the recent Gov. Edmund Brown, Jr.

Nixon had still been a potential adversary given his very narrow loss in 1960. The Kennedys did everything they could to ensure his defeat which resulted in his infamous 'you won't have Nixon to kick around anymore' farewell news conference.

The New York Times' James 'Scotty' Reston had famously said that New York's Republican Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's chances of not being the nominee in 1964 were about the same as his chances of going broke. He was wrong about that but Rockefeller was on the list with others.

The big fly in the ointment for Rockefeller was Arizona's Sen. Barry Goldwater. His name had been placed in nomination by fellow Arizonans at the 1960 Republican National Convention, against his wishes. He withdrew his name, supporting Nixon. Nelson Rockefeller, also a contender, also withdrew in favor of Nixon but Goldwater was catapulted into a national presence.

Kennedy was assassinated in November of 1963, throwing the entire 1964 Republican race into turmoil. His successor, Lyndon Johnson became the unchallenged Democratic nominee.

Goldwater immediately said that Americans would not accept a third president in just fourteen months and knew that Republican chances had collapsed. He was from the American Southwest, a completely different Republican background from that of the traditional blue bloods of the industrial northeast & Midwest. By 1964, because of dogged work among the rank & file of the party, he'd amassed a juggernaut of support that the Rockefeller wing could not defeat.

The Kennedys had feared Goldwater the most because he was the unknown. Kennedy had not done well in the West in 1960 & that was Barry's turf. Further, Robert wanted to drop Johnson from the ticket which could have put the South into play. With Lyndon Johnson heading the ticket, any southern and western strategies were difficult.

Michigan Gov. George Romney, Mitt's father, was among the Rockefeller wing, as were Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton, New York's Senators Jacob Javits, Kenneth Keating & Cong. John Lindsay, and Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge. They all met at a Stop Goldwater event, to no avail.

At the San Francisco National Convention, Goldwater was nominated on the first ballot and many of the Rockefeller wing stormed out, refusing to endorse him. Romney sat on his hands throughout the campaign and introduced Goldwater at a Michigan rally as the 'Republican nominee for president' rather than the traditional 'next president of the United States.'

Lyndon Johnson received the Democratic nomination and pulled out the plugs for viciousness. He had Goldwater depicted as a racist and a war monger with an itchy finger on the nuclear button. One infamous TV ad showed a little girl picking daisies and a voice counting down from ten to one that ended with a nuclear bomb mushroom, Goldwater immediately telephoned Johnson and told him if he used it again, he'd sue. Johnson didn't.

Kennedy and Goldwater had been good friends in the Senate and were frequent lunch partners, going so far as to co-sponsor legislation & had one thing in common; they both despised Lyndon Johnson. Johnson swept 44 states with Goldwater taking his native Arizona and five southern states. Immediately after the election Johnson began the military buildup that he'd warned we'd have with Goldwater and that led to the collapse of South Viet-Nam and Cambodia.

The Rockefeller wing, aided and abetted by The NYT, WAPO and the other usual suspects began grooming their 'solutions' to lead the Republican Party out of the Goldwater wilderness. By 1968, Richard Nixon had had a rebirth by laboring, as Goldwater had, in the trenches, campaigning for Republicans across the country.

The Rockefeller wing, with the willing aid of the media, anointed George Romney as Republican front runner. Romney basked in the accolades but he had several huge problems.

In spite of the eastern establishment's enthusiasm with Romney, he knew there was a new force emerging in American politics. He accepted that he'd have to make peace with Barry. He sent Goldwater a letter, pointing out, not completely accurately, that he'd never joined the Stop Goldwater movement. Barry responded, fine George but where were you when the chips were down. Scranton, by contrast, recognizing the danger of Lyndon Johnson, stumped hard for Goldwater in seven states.

Romney also had a severe hair style that led many to simply dislike, even hate, him. But there was much worse and it first cropped up when he referred to Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois, as an opportunist. What he meant was a person who seized an opportunity but the term means without principle.

It's important to realize that Percy was, otherwise, an obvious ally for Romney. He was fairly liberal in his voting record and from a neighboring state to Michigan. Percy was reportedly outraged. Far worse was to come.

It was standard fare at the time, perhaps less so now, for presidential hopefuls to go on fact-finding overseas tours to return with better insight for foreign policy. Romney went to Viet-Nam where he was given a tour by high ranking military personnel who, obviously, wanted to show our efforts and position in the best possible light. Romney came back saying he'd been brainwashed. His support plummeted, effectively ending his campaign for the nomination.

You might ask what does have to do with Mitt Romney, his son. Answer; everything! He has often said that his father was his single greatest influence. What was his father? I've presented a superficial but accurate summary of the background George Romney's political career. He can and should be categorized as what he called Percy, an opportunist. Mitt is too.

JUST SAY NO TO JOE

by Dave Heimbold

On Saturday January 30th, 2021 the Town Criers of the St Augustine Tea Party in Florida decided to take its first survey, versus a poll, on St George Street. The results were so lopsided that a decision was made to do the exact same survey the following week. However, they got rained out.

Photos by TCCR Staff

They questioned whether to keep the oil trans- national oil pipeline or to stop it. The results were a foregone conclusion;

92% said Keep
8% said Stop

Why a foregone conclusion? The price of gasoline had already gone up $17.50 a barrel or more since the Executive Order, by Joe in the first few days of his dictate!

Many personal stories, of people and family members, on St. George Street where the survey was being taken already had lost their jobs or knew someone who lost their job related to the pipeline and adjoining businesses. How could so many people be affected in such a short time? Because, the oil Market is international and there's things called 'Futures'.

It's obvious that senile 'Faux President and his handlers don't know anything about the Market, since they are socialist!

Consider: Since 10,000 visitors had to drive their automobiles to the St. George Street area, park and pay parking fees and gas up on the way to and fro, they were all quite pissed at the price of gasoline going up because of crazy Uncle Joe, the usurper, is an idiot.

Waiting for my dividend checks from oil fracking and oil pipe line construction companies. Could be a long wait!

Open Letter to the President

Knapp Photo

Dear President Trump,

A great injustice was done to the people of America with all that transpired in the recent presidential election. Electoral, judicial, and moral fraud was openly perpetrated upon the majority of patriotic Americans, but most especially your voters, just as it also was done to our Constitutional Rule of Law. Your opposition, which at the very least includes the Deep State government elite.....despite all Honor, Judicial, and Constitutional restraints, awarded the office of the presidency to your opponent. In effect, the Deep State elite awarded that office unto itself. Their overall intent is to replace traditional America with something else entirely.

Our political opposites chose to deny your base, 75 million strong, and their day in court. Over 80 challenges to the obvious fraud that occurred were systematically and routinely thrown out of courts, all the way to the Supreme Court. 'Plaintiffs have no standing', was the repeated claim of each court. 'No standing!' they decreed. (It was almost like collusion!) My three year-old granddaughter can't vote yet, but she still has standing when it comes to honest and fair elections in her country! Every other American does, too.

And so, the voluminous evidence of fraud was never allowed to be presented. Yours - and 75 million other American plaintiffs' sides - were thwarted. This is a very huge can that was 'kicked down the road' by the ruling elite. This travesty of an election will end up being 'The Final Straw', if it is not honestly and legally undone with the Truth. What our political opposites are doing portends terrible things for America. In so many ways, we are now living within a (virtual) charade of suspended disbelief.

Nevertheless, you have not been defeated by this treachery. I believe your finest patriotic accomplishments are right there, waiting for your continued leadership. You have 75 million supporters who are outraged at what's being aimed at America's history, continuity, and future.

Sir, you must continue what you started. You must gather together all the evidence of voter fraud that your side was never allowed to officially present in court, and make it available to every American, via DVDs, rallies, speeches, to churches, to groups, to all. In however many ways you can, you must now faithfully endeavor to lay the Honest Truth at the feet of all Americans. What happened in 2020 must never become the election norm, or America will be torn asunder. 75 million loyal Conservative Americans are not going to put up with election fraud in perpetuity. Doing this will take time, a supremely competent staff, and lots of money. You likely can also think of many other ways to promote the goodness and workability of traditional American Conservative values, even to those holed up in willfully-ignorant, mis-educated, and unpatriotic America.

I believe 75 million Trump supporters would be more than willing to donate to this cause, and any other Conservative causes you would champion. I believe almost all of the 75 million adult Americans whose day in court was denied - over and over again - would each be willing to send you $50.00 to help defray the costs of those things you must do now, in light of what your opposites have planned for this country. They must be stopped. You alone have that power. You are the leader of a new and disaffected, restless army.

This new presidential administration is fraudulent beyond a shadow of a doubt, must be made plain for all to see, including historians. America was not meant for mob rule. In the end, Good must triumph, or we become just another lost nation.

By the way, $50 from each one of your 75 million outraged supporters comes to 3.75 billion dollars. That's light on everybody, but plenty of seed money to get you started, to reset their current 'reset.' You can yet do great things for America. America needs you now, more than ever, President Trump. Godspeed. Thank you for your continued service.

Best Regards,
John Knapp
O'Brien, Florida

Fraud Cancels All

I celebrated President's Day by putting a brand new Trump 2020 flag in front of Camp Liberty. [My Rural Home] Donald J Trump is the 45th President of the United States. There is no 46th President lawfully elected. Fraud cancels all.

Who is being Stupid?

By Calvin Johnson

FB Image

My mother used to say, be careful who you call stupid because it can invariably come back to haunt you. That being said, Roger Brown with the Sarasota Herald-Tribune and USA Today Network undoubtedly hasn't learned that lesson. He referred to people in his editorial that do not wear masks as stupid and simple minded buffoons. His reasoning is that masks save lives and you have to be stupid for refusing to wear one. So is his reasoning correct or is he just trying to flex his seemingly superior politically correct muscle? The problem here in dealing with Covid19 and the wearing of masks is that true facts are hard to come by when dealing with this virus. There is just too much contradictory information going around. Yes wearing masks can help at times but these same masks can also harbor a cesspool of bacteria when worn any length of time. Also how often do you see people constantly adjusting these bacteria laden masks? And how often do you see people wearing their masks below their noses? So a lot of good these masks really are if you seriously think about it. And in some cases they may be the reason why people are getting sick by keeping germs close at hand or should I say in their face, for longer periods of time.

I enjoy watching pro football but one thing I have observed is that on the playing field the players are in the huddle, lining up against each other, blocking, tackling, jawing, and breathing all over each other, but then go to the sidelines and put on masks. So what is the point of wearing a mask on the sideline when all that has transpired, or is it just that the NFL is trying to appease the Politically Correct.

Of course in Duval County we have a mask mandate and I seldom see anyone in public not wearing one, but still Covid19 is spreading. Most of the people I know of who contracted the virus wear masks and do all the things that are recommend but still caught it, and generally do not know from where. So what do we do? Of course I do not have all the answers but one thing is for sure, and that is calling people stupid will not help anyone.

A MEMORIAM FOR RUSH

by Roderick Beaman

I was disappointed but not surprised to read the reactions of various liberals to the death of Rush Limbaugh. Thus, we have had to endure the usual eructation from the usual suspects. It would be easy to descend into hatred of them but then, that does nothing for the debate, and you've debased yourself to their level, below which there is little. As Richard Nixon said at the time his resignation, then they've won. The extent of the hatred is appalling but it is typical for the Left. In extreme cases, leftists hate everyone they disagree with, in even the slightest way, including other liberals. Josip Stalin reserved some of his worst fates for his former allies. When Fidel Castro consolidated power in Cuba, his purges of the Cuban communist hierarchy were notorious. Mao Zedong did the same in China.

By all accounts, even those he did disagree with, Rush was a very nice person, easy to talk to and very generous. He was always there to lend a helping hand, even to those who would soon be his competition.

As always, Rush's detractors tried to tarnish him with the broad brush of racism and sexism. Bill Raspberry was one of my very favorite liberal columnists. He was black. He was one of the last of the truly liberal, liberal columnists. He was open to other opinions. He once called Rush's program right wing hatred. Someone challenged him and asked if he'd ever listened to a broadcast. He admitted he hadn't and agreed to.

Raspberry, in another later column, apologized for having written what he did. He said that Limbaugh satirized liberals, not women and minorities. He found him entertaining, even if he still didn't agree with him. Rush had no problem with that. That cuts to the heart of why liberals so hated Trump. He satirized them. He held their views & statements up to examination and found their logic wanting and lampooned them.

Liberals/progressives had viewed satire as their exclusive fiefdom. They satirized conservatives, including our religions and thought it was their sacred right to do so. Rush turned it around on them and they were horrified. Liberals could give it but they couldn't take it. They responded with their misrepresentations, half-truths and outright lies.

I listened to him over the years often, depending on my work schedule, regularly, but in recent years rarely. As William F. Buckley once said about Joseph McCarthy, I never heard him say anything that matched in viciousness the things which were said about him. Buckley was the only other commentator who had such insight into the progressive mind. He once said that their intolerance was not just hostility to other opinions but astonishment that there even was another opinion.

Like Buckley, Rush was a deeply spiritual man which appalled liberals. At his heart, Rush realized that not one of us stands above another in God's eyes. This may be the biggest reason the progressives hated and still hate him so. Progressives cannot even conceive of anything else in the universe being above them and beyond their understanding.

In their view of themselves, Man is their God in the religion of Government. There can be nothing above them. They truly worship themselves and put up with no competition. Rush did not worship or even defer to them. Thus, they call him the names they do and this is why they hate him.

Great Birthday Gift!

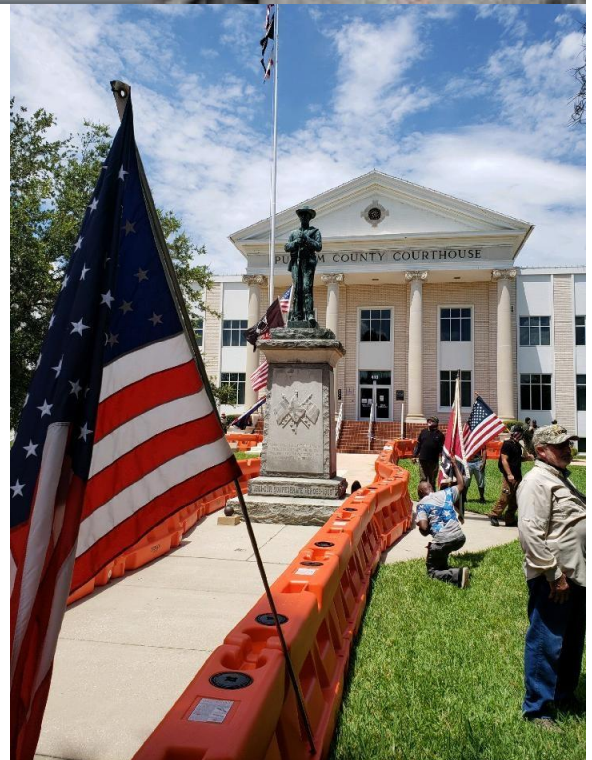

February 18, 2021

Dear Miss Lunelle,

I can't think of a better birthday present than to hear the news that in Palatka, Florida the Cenotaph to the Confederate soldier...white, black, brown, red and yellow...all of them...will remain! And that not a dime was raised for its destruction.

HK Edgerton at Putnam County Courthouse Cenotaph Rally - Summer 2020

Last year the County Commission set a threshold of $200,000 for those that sought to take down the Cenotaph to be raise for it to be removed to a narrow causeway under a bridge in a flood zone named "Veterans Park"...a site that would require much improvement to support any such edifice.

HK Photos

Rumor has it that the best the haters could do was to offer $17,000 to take down and destroy the soldier that has been erected by the United Daughters of the Confederacy and has stood a reminder for over 100 years of the sacrifice of the united Southern people at the hands of the invader from the north that came to pillage, plunder, rape and reconstruct and the defense made by men who looked like me and those they would call 'master' and 'friend'.

I have to extend a "thank you" to all the people in Putnam County that came out time and time again to show me love and who showed love for their community by fighting for their Cenotaph and what it means, especially to Commissioner Rawls who refused to compromise and who understood that you can't negotiate with terrorists...and that is what those who want to clear the landscape of any vestiges of my family and yours are.

I look forward to the day that I can return again to that city where my little brother and I were welcomed at the opening of the Dixie Outfitters store and later invited back to participate in the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Peace March, and then later still to stand side by side with Mr. McCallister and many others in support of that historic Cenotaph.

I know my mother, Miss Anna Bell Edgerton, must be smiling with pride for the little role I was able to play in this great result.

God bless you and God bless Dixie.

Your brother,
HK
