The culture shock of 'May Day', in the span of 87 years, has gone from 'May Pole' dances to 'Labor Day' with communist demonstrations of violence and hate. Clearly, these people pictured here are not laborers or workers. The spoiled, uninformed groupies do not work. They live off the system. They are the anarchists who are here to usher in the repugnant philosophy of Karl Marx. These anarchists, socialists, communists and BLM terrorists are not Americans in the traditional sense. Americans, as defined by our historic cultural experience, are born in and love Liberty. True red-blooded Americans are defined in the concept of individual liberty, self-reliance and they are a moral people. The educational system that exists today excludes these concepts. It distorts our history and the meaning of words. It is no wonder that our youth emerge from the educational factories of socialism and communism as strangers. Political correctness originated in the Soviet Union. There is no room for political correctness in America.

When We Stand United

by CS Bennett

The 1st Amendment states the following: “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.”

Bennett Photo

Just as Dr. Martin Luther King appealed to the promises proclaimed within our United States Constitution, and our Bill of Rights, to bring about change in America for the Negro, which Blacks were referred to back then, so must we today for our noble cause. Some will tell you that the United States Constitution is dead, while others will tell you that it is no longer relevant, to which I say, those who believe that it is dead have no hope or fight in them, and those who say it is irrelevant, they have little conviction and no fight in them. Like Dr. King, we must demand from our government that which was not only promised to us but was written in the blood of those patriots who gave their lives for this great republic and the principles within it when all seemed lost. As I remind groups I have spoken to all over the Southeast and East Coast, and across the fruited plain, we could have ceased to exist as a nation during the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Spanish American War, the Civil War, and in our battle with the bigots and KKK-minded segregationists of the democrat run South, and their political party who institutionalized slavery, segregation, Black Codes, voter intimidation, and Jim Crow Laws, but we did not cease to exist. Standing up to all forms of evil and tyranny, our historic leaders never wavered, nor did they give up the fight, nor should we in the face of adversity today. Defeatism and disloyalty to God and Country is no way to win a war. We must remain courageous and resolve in order to win this fight, as our leaders before us proved to us.

As long as I have breath, I will fight to the death, if that is what it will take to preserve that which God has given us and is etched in the blood of fallen patriots and in the ink that plainly reads, The United States Constitution. We have the right to speak our minds, my friends. We have the right to lawfully and peacefully assemble to petition the government for a redress of our grievances. And we have the right to do all of this without being harassed, intimidated and punished by the government. Once again, remember that it was the original thirteen colonies that sanctioned, gave birth and power to, the federal government as we know it today, something I have mentioned in earlier commentaries. As I see it, they are way past due, the few conservative-led states that remain faithful, loyal, and true to the US Constitution and our Bill of Rights, in reigning in this out-of-control monster. Despite our sometimes-spineless conservative leaders, it is the true grassroots patriot that is fighting this battle on a daily basis and winning, though it is one battle at a time. Lord knows what we can accomplish if we reclaim the White House with a leader who has the passion and determination and support of the true patriot.

So, how do we go about preserving this republic and our rights and freedoms? There are some among us who want to disband the Republican Party, and to that I say, although I am of the mindset of Presidents Washington and Adams, who frowned upon the idea of having political parties, we must admit that we did not listen to them. So, today we find ourselves stuck with two prominent political parties. One has a platform that wants to fundamentally change our republic, force us to do their bidding, and suppress our freedom of speech in the process. More than anything, they want to strip away our 2nd Amendment rights because it poses a major barrier, and threat, to the world elites in their efforts to subdue us; we a large and powerful armed citizenry. The other party has a rich history, but its leaders often fail to remain true to the principles provided within the framework of our country's founding. The only hope for this particular party is the grassroots patriot. This is the only party capable of standing up to the other political party with designs on burying us on whole and bringing about tyranny and oppression to our doorsteps.

As you may know, we are the only country in the world where the citizens have an expressed right to bear arms. And that is why they have been attacking our 2nd Amendment right. We must also put the Almighty back into the struggle and the cause we care so much about. All of us must keep in mind that those opposed to our rights and liberty and our free-market system, are dead serious about destroying our republic and our side in the process. They are not taking any prisoners. So, we are left with submitting to their will or standing up to them, less we all become enslaved. Over the annals of history, when we stand up for our rights and what we believe in, we win. When we stand united, we win, our republic wins, and most of all, our children win... That should be the final outcome we are striving for.

Know that this is solely my opinion... In the face of a corrupted government with nefarious and evil intent, I remain positive about our ability to rise up as a free nation and let the government know who really has the power. It is 'We The People'. This is something we must never let the government forget.... Never ever!!!

War is a Racket

The America First Committee and Make America Great Again... With Long Standing Marxist Presence

“Isolationism” is a government doctrine of taking a limited role or no role in the affairs of other nations. Isolationists in America have viewed the world differently from that of other global societies. They held that America’s exceptional nature could advance the cause of liberty and freedom by means other than foreign alliances and wars. The isolationist feelings in America dates back to the colonial period. The last thing many American colonists wanted was any continued involvement with the European governments that had denied them their economic freedom and exposed them to religious persecution. This was coupled with their continual wars. Indeed, they took comfort in the fact that they were now effectively “isolated” from Europe by the immensity of the Atlantic Ocean. The beginning of American isolationism is found in Thomas Paine’s famed paper “Common Sense,” published in 1776. Paine’s impassioned arguments against foreign alliances caused the delegates to the Continental Congress to oppose the alliance with France until it became obvious that the revolution would be lost without it.

TCCR Screenshot Image

President George Washington defined the intent of American isolationism in his Farewell Address:

“The great rule of conduct for us, in regard to foreign nations, is in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves, by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.”

The isolationist policy embraced by Washington and the other Founders guided the nation for much of its early history. Americans from the beginning wanted their unique experiment in individual liberty to spread to other countries, but they sought to change the world by setting an example and by attraction.

While isolationism has been practiced to some degree in U.S. foreign policy since before the War for Independence, isolationism in the United States has never been about a total avoidance of the rest of the world. Instead, most American isolationists have pushed for the avoidance of the nation's involvement in what Thomas Jefferson called "entangling alliances." U.S. isolationists have held that America could and should use its wide-ranging influence and economic strength to encourage the ideals of freedom in other nations by means of negotiation rather than warfare.

The seeds of the abandonment of American isolation policies were cast at the dawn of the 20th century. The Spanish American War, though relatively brief, started America on a new path of colonial expansion. Leftist progressives using "Yellow Journalism" beat the war drums for war against Spain to eliminate the last remains of Spanish colonialism in the Caribbean and the American hemispheres. [Yellow journalism is an American term for journalism and associated newspaper outlets that use eye-catching headlines and present little well-researched news. Ed] Two of the most prominent proponents of yellow journalism were William Randolph Hearst and Joseph Pulitzer. William Randolph Hearst was a Democrat Progressive and Joseph Pulitzer was a Jewish Hungarian immigrant with Liberal and Progressive values that he imposed upon the Republican Party with his news organization. The concept of a uni-party and a corrupted press has existed from the very outset of the modern and current two party system. Politicians of both parties love big government and the Communists feed on their greed.

America's victory in the Spanish American War resulted in the acquiring of certain territories in the Pacific Ocean, mainly Guam and the Philippines. The acquisition required an outlying U.S. Naval base to secure the new possessions. Once again the policy set down by America's Founders were set aside and Pearl Harbor, a port in the Hawaiian Islands, was occupied by the U.S. Navy. In time the Hawaiian Monarchy was removed from power and the islands became a U.S. territory. The result of this colonial expansion, using future CIA tactics, would have far reaching consequences under a future progressive president, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

But first, Teddy Roosevelt would have a part to play in the progressive game of expanding the Federal Government's power and control over the people. Federal control was particularly significant as it related to the control of the Western lands over the interests of the people and the States. Also Roosevelt's active rejection of America's traditional isolationist policy would be made visible for all to see.

Woodrow Wilson, with his progressive agenda, promoted the income tax and the IRS, along with the elimination of the several States' direct representation in the Senate. Entangling alliances were proposed by Wilson with his support of the League of Nations, the forerunner of the United Nations. All this fits the consolidation of power so desired by Marxists. The League of Nations was a global consolidation of power created to prevent wars, that the various governments' war policies created. With the conclusion of the First World War, the American people had had enough of Marxist progressive policies. America returned briefly to a period of isolationism.

Was the AFC a Forerunner to MAGA?

Some members of Congress and influential private citizens, headed by well known aviator, Charles Lindbergh, formed the America First Committee (AFC) with the specific goal of preventing America from becoming involved in World War II which was underway in Europe and Asia. The AFC held its first meeting on September 4, 1940. Charles Lindbergh told the gathering that while isolationism did not mean walling off America from contact with the rest of the world, "It does mean that the future of America will not be tied to these eternal wars in Europe. It means that American boys will not be sent across the ocean to die so that England or Germany or France or Spain may dominate the other nations."

"An independent American destiny means, on the one hand, that our soldiers will not have to fight everybody in the world who prefers some other system of life to ours. On the other hand, it means that we will fight anybody and everybody who attempts to interfere with our hemisphere," Lindbergh declared. Lindbergh clearly demonstrated support for the Monroe Doctrine. "The doctrine that we must enter the wars of Europe in order to defend America will be fatal to our nation if we follow it," Lindbergh stated prior to December 7, 1941. Post WWI American isolationism reached its high point in 1941 growing to over 800,000 AFC members. It appears that as foreign policy goes, AFC and the current MAGA movement display a similar national pride and a determination to make and keep America strong and independent, functioning for the people as opposed to those who profit from war. Lindbergh as the AFC leader became labeled a pro-Nazi sympathizer by the progressive communists much in the same way that Trump was vilified for violating the establishment global agenda, calling him a Russian collaborator and traitor. The AFC disbanded on December 11, 1941, after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. Its final press release stated that while its efforts might have prevented the war for Americans, the Pearl Harbor attack made it the duty of all Americans to support the war effort to defeat Nazism and the Axis powers. Lindbergh, the patriot, flew more than 50 combat missions in the Pacific theater as a civilian, and after the war traveled throughout Europe helping the U.S. military rebuild and revitalize the European continent.

War is all About Profit

War is about exceptional profits for a few at the expense of many who are forced to pay in treasure and blood. In 1935, Major General Smedley Butler wrote "War is a Racket." The book exposes the real motive for war, which is the extraordinary profits available in the prosecution of war. At the time of his death in 1940, General Butler was the most decorated Marine in U.S. history. He was a combat soldier. Before "The Pentagon" existed, before America's entry into World War II, Major General Smedley Butler was warning the American people of what would later be called the Military Industrial Complex. General Butler died on June 21, 1940. From 1935 until his death, General Butler tried to enlighten the public as to the real causes of war. World War II was in full swing in both Europe and Asia. Common sense suggests that the bombing of Pearl Harbor may have been the spark to start the war for America, but the decision to go to war was made well in advance of the Japanese attack. Federal officials made the decision to construct the Pentagon as a low level building sprawled out over 28 acres, instead of a high rise structure, so as to conserve steel that would be needed for the upcoming war effort. Those decisions were made a year before the Japanese attack. Construction started on the world's largest office building on September 11, 1941, three months before the Japanese attack. Someone was planning well in advance—way past the WW II victory that was to come. An office building was needed in which the business of America's never ending wars could be conducted. When the communist containment wars ended, the middle east oil wars began. Now the war drums beat again in the Ukraine Putin war—a conflict without a cause, just bare graft and corruption.

Twenty-six (26) years after General Smedley Butler began his campaign against war profiteering, President Dwight Eisenhower, in his farewell address, brought forth the concept of a vast “Military Industrial Complex.” The key points that he made still resonate today:

- 1. “Our military organization today bears little relation to that known by any of my predecessors in peacetime”;
- 2. “This conjunction of an immense military establishment and a large arms industry is new in the American experience”;
- 3. “In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex.”

What if we had stayed True to our Founding Principles

Our Founding Fathers brought forth a nation unlike any other in the entire recorded history of mankind. Nature's God bestowed a blessing conceived in liberty and property which was vested in the individual—a country where the people were the elite and those who governed were the servants. Considering this nearly divine concept, what could America have in common with governments controlled by monarchs and kings and dictators and emperors? In the wisdom of Washington and Jefferson, America needed to stand alone politically avoiding entangling alliances.

Had the American leadership at the end of the 19th century resisted the Marxist demands for war against Spain, the remnants of Spain's colonial influence in the Americas would have crumbled under its own weight in time. It was already failing. Without war with Spain we would not have acquired the various Pacific islands and would have avoided the temptation of colonial expansion. By not expanding our territory into the Asian and particularly Japanese sphere of influence, there would have been no attack on America in 1941; consequently it is unlikely that Hitler would have declared war on America as he did not need to support his Japanese axis ally against the United States. The American people of 1941 had nothing to gain by joining a war between two emperors in Asia or two totalitarian dictators in Europe. By the beginning of 1941 the air Battle of Britain had been decided in favor of the British and their overwhelming Navy would have made a German invasion a disaster for the Third Reich. A traditional American isolationist policy would have been a policy that ended up with Nazis fighting Communists. The only chance for Hitler's victory against the Soviet Union was a successful "Blitzkrieg" operation in Russia in 1941. That did not happen because the German offensive outran their own supply lines. Their armies stalled and were subjected to the harsh Russian winter. When the Germans were finally forced to fight a defensive war, their cause was lost—primarily for lack of fuel.

The United States could have sold oil to the Nazis. America was an oil exporter at the time. At the same time the U.S. could have sold strategic bombers to the Communists. Long term fighting in Russia and Germany would have exhausted both of these two evil regimes. An America free from any soldiers in the field and its citizens safe in "Fortress America" could have been a realistic reality. Without firing a shot the American people would have won the war. America's Treasury would have been enriched with Russian and German gold. Instead, progressive leadership in Washington spent America's treasure and blood and left the door open for unending wars. We believe it was by design.

In 1940 Charles Lindbergh predicted that a failure to follow our traditional isolationist policy would end up fatal to our nation. It should be remembered that Lindbergh was extremely popular and was the Trump of his time. His America First Committee was a forerunner of the Tea Party and MAGA movements to come. In the 125 years since their beginning in America, the Communists have positioned the United States for the fatal times Lindbergh foretold. We are not suggesting that Lindbergh foresaw the exact state of affairs we are in today.

However, we are suggesting that by not following the principles of America's founding, the result thereof has put the American people in great danger. The final phase of the "Progressive Communist" revolution is taking place. The post WW II era has witnessed the complete abandonment of the founding principles and values of America.

Our membership in the United Nations provides an imminent danger to U.S. sovereignty and the termination of the individual freedoms enumerated in the Bill of Rights. The Chinese Communist Party, through the UN's World Health Organization, has had a crippling influence on American liberty as witnessed by the recent fake Pandemic. Agenda 21 and Agenda 2030 are spears in the flesh of the U.S. Constitution. The Constitution is no longer the supreme law of the land. The right of the American people to declare war was vested in the House of Representatives. The Congress has delegated that authority in large part to the executive branch.

However, the most dangerous war-making authority has been transferred to the acts of foreign governments by numerous treaties, the most notable one being NATO. American involvement in NATO transfers the war making decision to unknown numbers of countries as the membership in the organization continues to grow. The communists are out in the open now, not even trying to hide. They must retain power and there is nothing the Marxist won't do, including total war. The sad part of all this is the youth of America do not have a clue as to what is being surrendered. Since it is they who have to fight the wars, hopefully they grasp the idea that War is a Racket.

Remembering Our Fallen

By CS Bennett

There are bad people throughout the world, evil people, and many of them are at odds with the way we Americans live, and as a result, their aim is to eradicate us. These are very dangerous people. These are anti-American at their core. When the opportunity affords them, nothing has stopped them from planning an attack on us. They have targeted us in the past and they will again. Thankfully, we have something called the United States Armed Forces that stand in the way of these malcontents from completely taking over us. Because of their professionalism and vigilance, our elite vanguard has prevented many a planned attack on us.

FB Image

Because these nefarious groups refuse to abide by accepted military protocols for waging war, we must continue to be prepared for their use of stealth, terror, and deadly violence against innocent civilians. In the past they have had names such as Al Qaeda, ISIS, Black September, Hamas, Hezbollah, the Muslim Brotherhood, the Taliban, Jama'atu Ahlis Sunna Lidda'Awati Wal-Jihad (or Boko Haram), and Al-Shabaab. These are men, and women, who mean business when it comes to targeting freedom lovers in the Western World. And they do these dastardly things in the name of religion, or so they claim. In my understanding of warfare, that makes them even more dangerous when they come after us.

No, you do not hear much about them these days, but do not let your guard down. Never underestimate them. These are adversaries who are adept at using unconventional warfare, and engaging us using guerrilla tactics at a time and place they select to attack. Thank goodness though, we have the answer to these unconventional fighters the world over and those hiding within our borders.

Our home-grown answer to Islamic Jihad, Narco-terrorists, and closed societies such as North Korea, Russia and China remains with the tips of our spear, the US Special Operation Command, to include units such as the 160th SOAR, US Army Rangers, Air Force Combat Controllers, Delta Force, SEAL Team Six, US Army Special Forces (Green Berets), US Navy Seals, and MAR SOC Marine Raiders. These are our elite forces. These are our crème de la crème warriors, the best we have. Without them, it would be a difficult road to go down in defending against and defeating these formidable adversaries. The sacrifices our forces make are huge. Most are away from their families for months, in some cases, years. Backing these brave souls are America's massive and well-trained and well-armed conventional forces, the finest and best trained on the planet, to include our Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force. Sadly, many have died, and continue to die, doing battle with these bad people and other forces of oppression and evil. So, let's not forget them. Listen, please...

The journey paved for us was by the blood of those who answered the call and lost their lives in battle and they must never be forgotten. Our national cemeteries are full of men and women who were shot up or blown to pieces, some their once warm and vibrant bodies never found. Let us remember them this Memorial Day. Beginning with the Revolutionary War, and subsequent wars after that, our men and women have made the ultimate sacrifice to keep this nation free. Let's not take this upcoming holiday observance lightly. Our heralded heroes took an oath to protect and defend this land, to include our US Constitution. At heart, we are lovers of peace, not war, I say having served alongside these warriors. But if we must fight, then we will, and gallantly. Let us not allow what we hold so precious to us slip away, and that is remembering the lives that are no longer with us, all who died defending our land, our liberties, our Constitution, our flag, and our right to worship our Almighty God.

Let's pray for them and their families' loss sometime during this solemn day...
